

The New York Times Style Magazine

May 17, 2015

This And That

ON THE VERGE

The New Southern Cuisine

Rising chefs are putting shrimp-and-grits country on the culinary map.

THE GREY Savannah, Ga.

Mashama Bailey (above), a former sous-chef at Manhattan's popular Prune, returned last year to the city where she spent much of her childhood to helm a new restaurant in what was once a Greyhound bus station.

Bailey will serve local specialties like seafood boudin — a blend of crayfish, shrimp and rice, topped with prawn chips — and more exotic dishes such as braised eel with cabbage, tomato and onion. thegreyrestaurant.com